EXPECT WEEK END CROWD TO PROVE BIGGER THAN LAST

Some Of Best Racers In Country Now Quartered At Home Course

Tanforan opened its 25 day spring meeting a week ago with one of the largest crowds and most successful racing days ever known at the San Bruno course, according to an announcement by John W. Marchbank, directing owner of the oval. More than 15,000 persons attended the inaugural, and the mutual windows received record play.

With fine weather assured for this week end as great a crowd is expected to turn out tomorrow (Saturday) for the San Francisco Handicap over a mile and a sixteenth, with three year olds and upward competing for a $5,000 purse. During the coming week some of the track's finest horses will compete, and some of the stars that didn't do so well last week may turn up winners tomorrow. Azucar and Tick On, both favorites with Tanforan fans and both with some brilliant runs to their credit, were backed heavily last week, but failed to even see the money.

A. A. Baroni's Top Row, the horse that won the $100,000 Santa Anita this year, is expected to appear in a few preliminary races during the coming week, as sort of a workout for his bid for the $10,000 Marchbank Handicap the closing day. Top Row is said to be in top shape.

Again this year Masons will have their day at Tanforan, when Shrine charities will benefit from a program next week. Special events of unusual interest have been planned, and thousands of Bay area Masons will be in attendance.

Jockeys, who fail to do their best, were dealt a severe blow this week, when stewards grounded Albert Gunari for the remainder of the meeting, with a sharp warning that riders who fail to meet rules and do their best will not ride at Tanforan.

Wednesdays and Fridays are ladies days this spring and the first two proved a marked success. The thousands who have attended Tanforan at the current meeting found the historic oval more picturesquely attired than ever. New trees and shrubs have been planted, the infield has been graded and grassed and two artificial lakes built to enhance the color of the racing mecca.

UNION HIGH SCHOOL BONDS APPROVED LET'S GO ON TO FURTHER PROGRESS

Need For New Class Rooms And Gymnasium Recognized By Voters Of District At Tuesday's Election—Other Improvements Are Contemplated

Proposition Carries By Big Margin Of Almost Four To One—Outside Sections Strong In Affirmative.

One of the best examples of the progressiveness of our citizens was displayed by the result of the election for the Jefferson Union High School bond issue on Tuesday of this week.

The trustees had asked for this issue, amounting to $85,000, for the purpose of constructing a modern and up to date gymnasium and also additional class rooms.

The spirit displayed by citizens was wonderful and showed that, when the facts are fairly and properly presented to them, they are ever ready to move forward and support any proposed progressive movement for the welfare of the community.

Too much praise cannot be given to the students—not only of the high school, but also those attending the elementary schools. These boys and girls turned out en masse and put up one of the snappiest exhibitions of hustling out the vote seen in many a long day.

The students were ably supported by Principal James Ferguson and the entire high school faculty, as well as by the members of the board of trustees. These men and women proved their worth and sincerity by being on the job early and late—not alone on election day, but for many days and evenings before the set date.

All in all, it was a wonderful display of team work, co-operation and harmony in support of a common and progressive movement.

The result proves what can be accomplished for the betterment of our community by the citizens when they work together for any needed improvement.

The complete picture follows:

Total vote cast, 1807; in favor of the bonds, 1444; against the bonds, 363.

MAN IS SLAIN BY AUTOMOBILE ON JUNIPERO SERRA

Transient Worker Struck Down — Dead On Arrival At Hospital

Death rode in the path of a car driven by Charles Simonini, 29, 937 Pacific avenue, last Saturday evening, as he was traveling south on the Junipero Serra boulevard, about 200 feet north of School street. The car struck Joe Margini, 55, a transient worker on a farm in Colma. The injured man was removed to the Villa Sanatorium for treatment. He was pronounced dead on arrival there by the doctors in attendance.

The remains were removed to the mortuary establishment of W. C. Lasswell & Co., where Deputy Coroner Luella D. Pepper took charge of the case.

Simonini was arrested on a charge of manslaughter. Judge Risso later set his bail at $250.

Margini was a transient and as far as could be learned has no surviving relatives.

JEFFERSON UNION HIGH SCHOOL P.T.A.

The executive board of the Jefferson Union High School P. T. A. met at the home of Mrs. Marian Stevens, Wednesday afternoon of last week. After a delicious luncheon, served by the hostess assisted by Mrs. Edith Ferguson, a business session was held with Past President Mrs. Bentley presiding in absence of the president.

There will be a card party at the home of Mrs. Stella Jensen, Monday evening, March 30.

The next regular meeting will be held Wednesday afternoon, March 18, at the High School at 2 o'clock.

LOCAL POLICE NAB BAD CHECK PASSER IN AUTO

Arrest Man And His Companion When They Became Suspicious Of Actions.

As two members of the local police force patrolled the district in the vicinity of Jefferson Union High School, last Sunday morning about 2:30 o'clock, they spotted an automobile with a license plate turned upside down and decided to investigate. Upon questioning the driver of the car they learned he was registered at the Golden Gate Auto Camp as Harry Gordon of San Diego, with a woman companion.

Officers found other license plates, registered to the car he was driving, under the front seat of the machine.

Teletype messages to the motor vehicle department at Sacramento revealed that these plates belonged to a car registered from Santa Cruz. Chief of Police Morrison was contacted. He stated the plates had been stolen on March 3 from an automobile parked in a used car lot in Santa Cruz.

Local police also learned from the San Francisco Police Department that Harry Gordon, alias J. H. Phillips, was wanted by the Oakland Police Department, and in Watsonville, Los Angeles and by the sheriff's office at Salinas on charges of passing bogus checks in the above named places.

Gordon and his companion, Ella Ida Koehler, were taken to the sheriff's office at Redwood City and held for the Santa Cruz police.

Gordon has been wanted for the past two years on bad check charges, having passed them from Los Angeles on up north.

JUST FEW JOKES--BUT THEY HELP TO ENLIVEN AN OTHERWISE FEATURELESS COUNCIL SESSION

The Music Goes Round And Round And Comes Out Nowhere In Particular—Some Peculiar Legal Decisions Are Rendered.

Our Daily City Council met in regular session at the City Hall, Monday evening of this week.

The Fire Commissioners recommended purchase of a 12 foot roof ladder for Station No. 5. Granted.

The Fire Commission informed the council that former Fireman Conci had waived a hearing regarding his discharge from the department. He signed the referendum petition for placing the Civil Service Ordinance on the ballot—before his removal.

Sebastian Castro asked for a permit to manufacture a bleaching fluid within the city limits. A motion was made and seconded to lay the matter over for two weeks while the chief of police investigated the nature of the fluid. But, when Castro was discovered in the audience and assured the council no harmful effects would result through the manufacture of his commodity, the councilman who seconded the original motion moved that the permit be granted. This was seconded by the mover of the original motion and carried. We wonder what happened to the original motion on this question.

Senator McAdoo transmitted copy of a letter received by him from Secretary of Agriculture Wallace anent federal assistance in building of the Ocean Shore highway from the San Francisco Presidio to the Monterey Presidio. The letter stated the funds must be secured through the State Highway Commission.

The application of George William Hoppman to be appointed a fireman in Station No. 3 was approved.

Resolutions were adopted confirming purchase of portions of lots 7, 8 and 9 in block 21, Vista Grande Tract No. 1, were adopted.

A resolution was read providing for the calling of a general municipal election on Tuesday, April 14, 1936. The resolution also contained names of certain persons to act as inspectors, judges and clerks at the various

TO HOLD COUNTY COMMUNITY GOOD WILL BANQUET

Plan Get - Together And Big Feast For All Civic Minded Citizens

Several civic organizations and a large group of prominent citizens are lending their support to a County-Community Good Will Dinner, which will be held at the Benjamin Franklin Hotel, on next Tuesday evening, March 24.

Guests of honor on this occasion are Supervisor Albert J. Witt of Daly City and Hugh R. Pomeroy, Planning Commission advisor. This first county-wide get-together of citizens is in recognition of the effort put forth and the success obtained by these gentlemen on their recent trip to Washington, D. C., where they were largely instrumental in having immediately released all "frozen" San Mateo County PWA projects.

These projects had been tied up for months in Washington due to official red tape, etc. Many other matters of vital importance to the welfare of San Mateo County were presented to the federal officials, such as the inclusion of Butano Forest in the National Park Program, and the introduction of a bill in Congress for the federal construction of the Ocean Shore Highway from the San Francisco Presidio to the Monterey Presidio.

This dinner is the first of a series of many similar gatherings that are being planned for different sections of the County, where guests of honor will be those citizens who have rendered some outstanding service for the advancement of San Mateo County.

As only a limited number of tickets are available it is important that anyone desiring to attend this affair communicate with any member of the committee, or the Benjamin Franklin Hotel, prior to Saturday, March 21, for reservations.

ENGLISH RACE EXPERT ENJOYS SPORT HERE

By J. W. MARCHBANK

Audax visited Tanforan on opening day. As well-informed racing people know, Audax is one of the leading authorities in the world on the thoroughbred horse. In conversation one gets the clue to the wonderful progress the writer has made in his life work.

He does not think he knows it all and is ever seeking knowledge. For example, in the sport at my track he wanted to be told about the "sharp bends," the stall gate and other things new to him. Incidentally, it may be said it was the first afternoon's racing on an American track he had ever witnessed. Minutely familiar with all the courses in England and conversant with racing in South Africa, Chile and other places, he had never been in this country on any previous occasion when worth while thoroughbred sport was on.

The question: "How did you happen to assume the nom de plume 'Audax'?" brought the response:

"My father had used it and when I took up the task of writing for 'Horse and Hound' I thought it was a good idea to continue its use."

The "Horse and Hound," probably the most-quoted racing publication in the world, is owned by Audax (Arthur F. B. Portman) and everywhere is admired for its thoroughness and independence. As Mr. Portman said, he writes about breeding and racing as he sees them, without any entanglements whatever.

The visitor is easily seen to be a man of modest pretensions, but great accomplishments. It was typical he should make a request that his presence at the course be not heralded through the loud speaker. As is the case with most men of achievement he is in no sense a seeker of publicity.

Audax has a remarkable memory, as is shown by his ability to reel off the name of the winner of the Epsom Derby of any year mentioned. As the race has been run since 1780, when won by Diomed, later sent to this country to establish an illustrious line, the feat is no small one.

He has been at Epsom each summer to witness the running of the Derby since 1877, when Silvio, with the famous Fred Archer in the saddle, was first.

Just as a sturdy jumper takes off at a hard fence in bold fashion, so it is apparent the visiting racing journalist approaches the many problems of the sport. It would seem "Audax" is in no way a misnomer; classical scholars tell us, audax is the Latin word for bold.

DEMOCRATS LEAD IN COUNTY LISTS OF REGISTRATION

Ahead By Several Thousands According To Latest Tabulation

Information has just been received that the voters of San Mateo County, for the first time in several years, are registering Democratic. It is gratifying to note that the untiring efforts of our great President, Franklin D. Roosevelt, are appreciated and his policies for the return to normal times are approved by the electorate, and that the vitriolic attacks on him and his administration by the press and the party in the minority are going unheeded.

The latest report received is that with approximately 35,000 of the estimated 40,000 eligible voters having registered, the Democrats are leading by approximately 2000. By continued efforts on the part of the committees and Young Democrats this margin can and will be widened.

In order to give the voters an opportunity to express themselves as a body, and to co-ordinate the efforts and assure continued progress, formation of the Young Democratic Clubs are progressing rapidly. In Daly City full information can be obtained and applications received from Fred R. Linser, 478 Irvington street, who is a member of the Congressional Democratic Committee. It is with the thought that with a unified organization, comprising all the various clubs, success at the primaries in August and the general election in November can be attained.

If you have not registered, do not delay. Register now. Many places are established in Daly City for this purpose; and don't forget, register Democratic so that you may record your vote at the August primaries. REGISTER NOW.

Man has attained an ascendancy on this earth because he reasons.

Of all the creatures on earth he alone is able to think consecutively.

I admit that many of his tribe reason a very little.

But, unless they are morons, they can use their reasoning faculty, and if they don't they alone are to blame.

If you do not make use of your reasoning power, you have no one but yourself to answer for it.

In spite of the Declaration of Independence, I submit that all human beings are not born equal.

But they all have an equal chance to live and to learn and to think out their own problems.

Use that mind of yours. Keep it open. Keep it busy. Keep it active.

Take nothing for granted.

There is an old proverb to the effect that a man has two eyes and two ears, but only one tongue for a definite purpose.

Begin by learning to use your own language clearly and effectively.

There is nothing that will help you more on your way up the ladder than the ability to use words well and clearly.

Cultivate as far as it is possible the acquaintance of men and women who think deeply and speak well.

Read as much and as widely as it is possible.

All the world's wisdom up to this time can be found in books.

You need not learn alone from your own experience.

The experience of others is yours to employ whenever you are willing to take the trouble.

Wrestle with your own problems before you apply for help from others.

Make the acquaintance, and if possible gain the regard of intelligent busy people, who have mastered their own problems, and are usually willing to be of help to others.

There is so much to be gained from life that it is a shame to neglect it.

You may not leave the record of your achievement on the sands of time.

But you will at least get what there is to be got out of this life, and that is a great deal.

It is natural, said a great American orator, "to indulge in the illusions of hope."

Hope Isn't Enough

Hope always is an illusion. Through all time it has functioned as does the will-o-the-wisp, that little dab of ignited marsh gas which you sometimes see moving over bogs if you go out in the night in the summer time.

The man who indulges in the illusions of hope will never be rich, or important, or even moderately successful.

He gambles with his life as a professional gambler plays his game, with the difference that the professional gambler knows he is going to win—for he operates an apparatus which can't lose, while the illusion holder is lucky if he ever wins at all.

It stands to reason that if you know your own business and practice it that you will have more chance of success than if you try too much some other fellow's game.

Yet there are thousands, probably millions of people in this country who imagine that they can by using some kind of a "system" get rich quickly and continue to keep the money rolling in.

The psychology of such people is curious.

Having no knowledge whatever of the stock market, they put their savings into it without consulting intelligent men in Wall Street, lose it, repine for a little while, and then when they get a little more money through hard work go through the same process again, and once more are stripped of all they have.

Back your hope with knowledge and experience and you stand a reasonable chance of succeeding in the enterprise in which you have embarked.

Back it on tips, or your own "hunch" that experience is not necessary to enable you successfully to play some other man's game, and you will soon be going to your friends for help which you ought not to be given and which in all probability you will not be given.

In gambling houses, in the brokers' rooms where tickers count out the hours, you will find dozens of forlorn and poor but always hopeful men—and sometimes women.

What they live on I don't know. But it cannot be anything substantial for they are a sad and disconsolate set of people.

Why should anybody think that a game that thousands of people have played unsuccessfully can be beaten by a lucky guess or two?

EQUIPPED TO PARE

Andrew Newman of Dalystown, Irish Free State, dug up a potato that weighed two and three-quarter pounds. On examining the "spud" and trying to cut it he found something hard inside. When he cut the potato he found a pocket knife which he had lost two years before.

Still Coughing?

No matter how many medicines you have tried for your cough, chest cold or bronchial irritation, you can get relief now with Creomulsion. Serious trouble may be brewing and you cannot afford to take a chance with anything less than Creomulsion, which goes right to the seat of the trouble to aid nature to soothe and heal the inflamed membranes as the germ-laden phlegm is loosened and expelled.

Even if other remedies have failed, don't be discouraged, your druggist is authorized to guarantee Creomulsion and to refund your money if you are not satisfied with results from the very first bottle. Get Creomulsion right now. (Adv.)

CROCKER UNIT PARENT TEACHERS REGULAR MEET

Select Nominating Committee And Appoint Delegates To District Meeting.

Crocker P. T. A., conducted by the president, Mrs. Bernadine Lewis, held its regular monthly meeting in the P. T. A. room at the new Crocker School, Tuesday afternoon of this week. Although it was school bond election day, and several ladies were helping with the election, there was a good attendance.

Among the items of interest to those who were unable to attend were the reports of some of the standing committees.

Mrs. Walker, magazine chairman, reported having sent 48 subscriptions to the District before the contest in the units closed. She also read an interesting poem printed by Mrs. Price, past state president of California.

Mrs. Anderson reported six new members, and one more was added to the list before the meeting closed.

The following ladies were nominated and elected to the nominating committee: Mrs. Nora Clifton, Mrs. Gertrude Walker, Mrs. Nellie Caine, Mrs. Anderson and Mrs. Cavagnaro.

Mrs. Pauw reported on two study circles, one held at the home of Mrs. Katch and the other at the home of Mrs. Clifton. She also asked the ladies to attend the next sewing meeting at the home of Mrs. Dorn, No. 2 Risel street, to be held next Tuesday, March 17, at 11 o'clock. Come and bring your sandwiches, and start sewing for our next bazaar. Mrs. Dorn will have several things for us to start on.

Delegates were appointed for the March District meeting, Friday, March 20. They will be Mrs. Walker, Mrs. Pauw and Mrs. Dorn, who will attend with the president, Mrs. Lewis.

Mrs. Walker, who was a delegate to the February District meeting, gave an excellent report of the District Founders Day.

As our next meeting will be the same week as the District convention, delegates and alternates were appointed at this meeting. They were Mrs. Lewis, Mrs. Gaitor and Mrs. Walker as delegates, and the alternates are Mrs. Eason, Mrs. Abbott and Mrs. Cavagnaro.

Mrs. Walker and Mrs. Pauw were appointed on the committee for our next whist, to be held Thursday, March 19, at 1 o'clock. Refreshments will be served. Notice the early hour. Mothers will have plenty of time to get home and prepare dinner after the game is over. Come and bring some friends.

AUXILIARY AND POST CELEBRATE BIRTHDAY FETE

Daly City Unit No. 410, American Legion Auxiliary, held its regular meeting, Wednesday evening of last week. There was a good attendance and the members were glad to see several members who have been very ill back in their regular places again.

On Wednesday evening of this week a large group of members met at the home of Mrs. Alice Reilly to finish the chair robes and get them on their way to the Livermore Hospital. Work was also begun on articles for our "Country Fair," which will be held on April 25 at the Legion Hall on San Diego avenue.

Plans are being completed for a joint birthday party to be held with the Post tomorrow (Saturday) evening, March 14. The organization, are five years old and many things have been accomplished since the Post and Unit have been organized.

WEEKLY BULLETIN

By Chief A. P. Chesney

Chimneys, both old and new may be tested for the presence of cracks by building a smudge fire and while smoke is ascending freely closing the top of the flue to be tested.

The escape of smoke into other flues or through the chimney walls at once show openings that should be sealed.

As a general rule chimney walls that become too hot to touch with the hand without discomfort may be considered a menace to any woodwork with which they are in contact.

CLEANING FLUES

Chimney flues should be cleaned at least once a year, not only to improve the draft, but also because soot accumulations frequently cause fires.

A common, practicable means is to lower into the chimney a weighted sack, or bundle of rags attached to a rope long enough to reach the bottom of the flue.

FLOATING RIDE IS PRODUCED BY MOLA SPRINGS

New Device Prevents Loss Of Energy Metal Parts Of Cars

Just as human beings become tired after continued physical exertion, the metal parts of an automobile are subject to loss of "energy," or what is more commonly termed "metal fatigue." An excellent illustration of this loss of "energy" in metals is apparent in the springs of your automobile, according to the manager of the Mission Auto Company, Chrysler-Plymouth dealer here.

"The riding qualities of a new motor car," said the local dealer representative, "are smooth and free of 'jouncing,' but as the car grows older the ride becomes increasingly hard and bumpy, as springs lose their elasticity and become fatigued."

"To solve this depreciation of automobile springs, Chrysler engineers have recently developed Mola steel, a rugged spring steel of unusually high elasticity. This new type of springs, used in all 1936 Chrysler automobiles, may be subject to a pressure of many tons per square inch without loss of springiness, settling or breaking. The advantage of this high spring elasticity and freedom from settling, obviously affords Chrysler owners a high degree of riding comfort throughout the life of the car."

"For many years past the dominant feature of Chrysler cars has been their riding comfort. The new Mola steel has given Chrysler springs a greater strength, higher elastic limits and greater resistance to fatigue than ever before."

The Mission Auto Company manager stated that the new Mola spring metal was largely responsible for Chrysler's famous "floating ride."

TRUCK DRIVER VISION

You might spare yourself an accident—and you might understand the truck driver's predicament better—if you realized that few trucks offer the excellent visibility that now is given by the average passenger car. The truck's huge body behind the driver's seat, its heavy pillars in the cab, and the high hood in front, all tend to diminish vision.

DALY CITY ROD AND GUN CLUB

(By "Bill" Grantham)

The past week end showed quite a little improvement for the bass fishermen. Walter Krukoff, Frank Kinswood and "Old Sarge" Gambler sailed away for far away Marin shores last Sunday. Net result, no fish. But, their boatman hooked two. Kinda rubbing it in, I call it. Practically all fish caught were landed around Red Rock district.

"Doc" Rankin landed a nice 20 pounder Sunday, and, to show it wasn't a feuke, went right back today (Tuesday) and hooked an eight pounder.

Trolling is looking up and this week end should be a "honey." Moon and tides seem O. K.; clear weather and no doubt clear water will see the best Saturday and Sunday for the boys over a long period. Best bets, Red Rock, off California City, and the Straits. Take along a few sardines as the bass may be hungry and on the bottom. Don't be late in getting boat reservation. Give Les Volkman a ring and get all set, boats will be at a premium Sunday.

Wonder what that new light tackle rod has done so far this year. Rumor has it tied up with ribbons on the front room wall. How about it, Arthur? Get it out Sunday and let it see a little mud. Good luck!

Don't forget meeting night, eight o'clock, Friday, March 20. First day of spring. Bring that new member. We're going to town. Until then, good fishin' and good luck.

STORK SHOWER FOR POPULAR MATRON

Mrs. A. Cameron of Peoria street, assisted by Mrs. E. Rogers, entertained a group of friends at her home Monday evening of this week at a stork shower given in honor of Mrs. William Hutchings of Westlake avenue.

After the guest of honor had finished opening all the lovely surprise packages, dainty refreshments were served, the table being prettily decorated in pink and white crepe paper with a tiny pink crepe paper cradle as the center piece.

The guests were Mesdames W. Hutchings, W. Loomis, J. Larson, G. Moreno, R. Lohnes, H. Hutchings Jr., G. Morgan, J. Gerrans, Mr. Coen and G. Lowden and Misses Edna Lowden and June Tufts.

RELIGION IN THE NEWS

(By Rev. Miles Dawson)

In preparing a little work on Revivals of Religion in the past, I have been greatly impressed with the men God has used to bring about these sweeps of religious revival. There was Charles Wesley, whose life was methodical, and method even became evident in his religious life, so much so, that he received the nickname "Methodist." In childhood, he declined adoption by a wealthy relative in Ireland; and the one who took his place became an earl, and grandfather of the Duke of Wellington.

His companion in the ministry, George Whitefield, made the pair a study in contrasts, for he was raised from bootblack and waterboy in his father's English Tavern, to the great and persecuted outdoor preacher.

About fifty years later, God raised one Charles G. Finney, a skeptic. One day fleeing to the woods, young Charles fell on his face and pleaded for mercy from God. A change of life came, and he became the revivalist who led one hundred thousand to join the Churches of England.

Then in 1837, Dwight L. Moody was born at Northfield. During his boy-hood days, he was rough and self-willed, and ignorant of the Scriptures. When his Congregational Sunday School teacher announced a passage in John's Gospel, he looked in the Old Testament for it. But from this lad, there later came the great Bible teacher, whose Bible Institute in Chicago is one of the greatest in the world today. He was refused ordination because of his lack of education.

During Moody's time, Charles Hadden Spurgeon was sweeping Great Britain with the gospel. While he preached to 6500, his ushers turned people away, and his 800 loyal supporters remained in an upper room in prayer. These are the men who have been used in the past. Shall there be others yet to come?

FIRE COMPANY GIVES PARTY FOR GIRL

Miss Ernestine Cuneo of Peoria street was guest of honor, Saturday evening of last week, at a party given in the fire house of Company No. 4, in celebration of her sixteenth birthday.

Dancing was enjoyed during the evening, after which a buffet supper was served.

Bring Woodlands or Sea to the Reach of Flat-Dwellers

The vast ultra-modern flats of Austria and Germany usually have bare, windowless sides which might be used for commercial posters. But an artist has altered all that, says Tit-Bits Magazine. He painted scenic designs on the side of one, and so enraptured were the people that he soon obtained other commissions. The craze caught on, and now dozens of houses have been decorated with ships, birds, vigorous figures in action, and all kinds of woodland scenes.

Don't Entrust Your Own or Your Family's Well-Being to Unknown Preparations

BEFORE you take any preparation you don't know all about, for the relief of headaches; or the pains of rheumatism, neuritis or neuralgia, ask your doctor what he thinks about it—in comparison with Genuine Bayer Aspirin.

We say this because, before the discovery of Bayer Aspirin, most so-called "pain" remedies were advised against by physicians as being bad for the stomach; or, often, for the heart. And the discovery of Bayer Aspirin largely changed medical practice.

Countless thousands of people who have taken Bayer Aspirin year in and out without ill effect, have proved that the medical findings about its safety were correct.

Remember this: Genuine Bayer Aspirin is rated among the fastest methods yet discovered for the relief of headaches and all common pains... and safe for the average person to take regularly.

You can get real Bayer Aspirin at any drug store—simply by never asking for it by the name "aspirin" alone, but always saying BAYER ASPIRIN when you buy.

CAUGHT in the WILD

Midway to the stream channel he stopped where, through separate vistas, he could see both planes. The gray dawn had brightened enough to make them visible at a distance. He sat down on a log to wait. In the Eskimo suit, the cold was negligible.

A look at the constable's pistol showed it to be fully loaded. He took off the belt and buckled it on again under the loose fullness of his parka. Hoisted between the caribou skin and his rabbit-fur undersuit, the oil in the pistol mechanism would become warm. Cold oil is apt to jam a gun.

After making sure of the pistol, he had nothing to do except give his face an occasional rub to prevent frostbite. He sat restfully relaxed, as patient as an Eskimo hunter beside a seal hole. Very slowly the gray dawn brightened. It at last began to mellow into gold.

From across the lake came the crack of rifles—three shots in quick succession. Garth told himself that Huxby or his men were hunting moose. He surmised why. The engineer planned to cover the shattered ends of the three-seater plane's floats with rawhide.

The sun glared over the jagged barrier mountains into the frost-gripped valley. Quite a while later, Garth saw one of his four enemies come out of the trees near the lake shore, on the far side of the frozen glacier stream. The man carried a big folded hide on his left shoulder.

A shout turned the man's steps up towards the ford. Other shouts came from the slope above. Garth smiled. It was as he had foreseen. In coming to repair the floats of the three-seater plane, Huxby and his men had formed a line from the lake shore to timberline and searched the spruce woods.

But the hunters had found no trace of their quarry all the way to the bank of the frozen glacier stream. There, however, the snowshoe tracks coming down from the tundra made plain sign even for chechacos. Huxby came running along the trail, followed by the man with the moosehide.

Near the plane the engineer stopped for the miner to overtake him. They approached the stranded aircraft warily, with rifles raised, ready to shoot. When nothing happened, Huxby signed for his companion to drop the hide and climb aboard. As the man obeyed, another of the miners came running down the trail.

Huxby was looking at the tracks that led on along the lake shore. The man on the plane peered into the three cockpits. Huxby sighted the cabin plane across the corner of the lake. He shouted and pointed to it, but waited for the second miner to come up before starting on along the trail. The fourth man of the party appeared up the stream bank.

Garth slipped back behind thick cover and swung into a fast pace. He struck the stream bank above the ford. Trees cut off all view of the four trackers. Garth crossed the ice in the open stream bed and found cover again on the west bank. But instead of heading up the gulch, he kept straight on, parallel with the lake shore.

The thought of Lilith amused him. She had been seen only by the miner who had fired down from timberline. At the distance she must have been mistaken for a man. Only a degenerate criminal would knowingly shoot at a woman. But her short snowshoe trail following his own and Dillon's must have shown the trackers that the third member of his party was as helpless as the dead or wounded constable.

They would be perplexed to guess what had become of his two companions. No man could make off with two persons on his back. Even if Huxby had guessed the truth that Dillon was dead and his body aboard the cabin plane, he would be mystified by the puzzle of the third person who, with the snowshoe-runner, had been kept from boarding the plane.

Still smiling, Garth came to the placer camp. The big fire under the gravel-thawing kettles had died down to a bed of coals. The forelegs and hindquarters of the newly killed moose lay in the snow beside the brush lean-to. On the floor mat of spruce sprays, along with the bedding, was a pile of food—bacon, flour, sugar, dried fruit, tea. Back of the food were tight-lidded cans filled with dynamite, coils of fuse, and caps.

Garth jerked up the blankets. Under one set lay the strong canvas bag for which he was looking. He had hoped to find the constable's rifle. But one of the miners must have come to the valley without a gun. The carbine had not been left in camp.

The failure to find the weapon did not alter Garth's plans. Working fast, he filled the three-gallon teapot with packages of tea, salt and sugar. The pot went into an empty flour sack, along with a little dried fruit, some dynamite, and a pair each of tin cups, plates and spoons.

On the big stack of fuel beside the lean-to, he piled all the rest of the food and dynamite, the blankets, and the quarters of moose. With a shovel that was leaning against the rocker cradle he tossed coals from the fire into the base of the stack. The wood soon blazed up in several places.

With the flour sack pack and the bag of platinum alloy slung over his shoulder, he went downslope.

Garth lugged the sack across the open space and past the stunted spruce beside which Constable Dillon had been murdered. In a drift on the north side of the next tree, he dug a hole, dropped in the sack of alloy, and covered it over.

A backward look at the camp showed the bonfire flaming high. At any moment the frozen dynamite was apt to thaw enough to explode. From off to the left came angry shouts. The direction of Garth's trail had at last warned the pursuers of his raid on their camp. They were heading for it as fast as they could flounder through the drifts.

Instead of circling to double past them again, Garth slanted off down-slope towards the west side of the lake. There was no need to warn them about the dynamite. Before he had taken a dozen strides, the frosty air crashed with a thundering explosion. He bent forward and went pounding downhill through the soft snow as if breaking trail for a fast driven dog team.

When he neared the border of the muskeg he glimpsed a gray shape in the outer fringe of willows. No wolf could bulk so large. The she-grizzly had been first of the flesh eaters to find what was left of the newly killed moose.

Close looking and listening showed that the cubs of the great bear were not with her. Garth went straight towards the hogishly feeding beast until she caught his scent. She reared up to gaze her bloody jaws and roared as she had roared at him and Huxby and Mr. Ramill.

Garth very quietly turned to the left and angled off away from her. He was the two-legged creature who had several times shifted respectfully around her and her cubs during the summer. She watched him go, then returned to her greedy gorging.

He skirted along the border of the muskeg to where a narrow neck of the swamp extended up a little valley to a gulch in the side of the west mountain.

At the far bank he shifted sideways and crouched down behind a clump of willows. He did not have long to wait. Enraged by the destruction of their food and camp outfit and the taking of the platinum alloy, Huxby and his men must have rushed fast down the trail of their bedeviler.

From over across the corner of the muskeg came the warning roar of the disturbed grizzly. A quick shot followed. Close upon the report came an outburst of terrific snarling roars and a whole fusillade of shots. The roars suddenly ceased. But the firing kept up for four or five seconds.

"Scared. Wasting cartridges," Garth told himself. "Hopping mad at me, and, atop that, flurried by her charge. Hope she didn't get any of them."

His wish was soon fulfilled. All four trailers came plodding along the border of the muskeg. Huxby was in the lead. But the bearded man next behind shod forward beside him as he came striding out on the bog. Both happened to step two or three times on niggerheads. Then the miner hit the snow between tussocks.

The bearded man's curse as he plunged down into the quagmire jerked Huxby's glance around. He saw the trap a split second too late to keep on the tussocks. Like the miner, he shot down through the frozen crust into the deep slime and mud. The third man followed suit. But he was near shore, where the bog was only kneedeep. The fourth, lagging behind, halted on solid ground.

At Huxby's shouted orders, the last man ran to fetch poles of down timber. The two leaders were in almost to their armpits before the dead aspen trunks could be brought and shoved out to them.

Set on niggerheads, the poles gave support for the trapped men to pull themselves up out of the treacherously sucking quagmire. Other poles made a bridge for them, back to solid ground. But the bearded miner left his rifle down in the ooze.

Garth chuckled and looked to see Huxby backtrack with his men. Instead, the engineer headed up the bog valley towards the gulch. That added to Garth's mirth. By a quick return, the hunters could have stripped off the grizzly's hide before it froze. They were walking away from a rug that would have gone far towards replacing their burnt blankets. He had so tantalized and enraged them that they could think only of revenge.

To add insult to injury, he tramped a heavy trail up into a spruce thicket and built a small fire. Beside the fire, he scattered a handful of dried apricots and prunes. After that he skirted along the edge of the muskeg to its north end.

Here he came to where in ancient times, before it started to recede, the glacier had piled a big terminal moraine. This was the immense natural dam that held the lake in its bed.

Among the rocks of the rapids, on the slope of the lower valley below the falls, Garth made out the wreckage of Mr. Ramill's custom-built monoplane.

He worked his way down alongside the rapids to look closer at the wreck. What little had been left of the costly aircraft was not worth salvaging. But the tattered cover of one broken wing thrust up out of the white water within reach from the bank.

Garth started a fire of small sticks. He quenched it with damp moss, and used the charred stick ends to write on the wing fabric:

$5,000 reward for
V. HUXBY
Thief and Murderer.

CHAPTER XI

Female of the Species.

Shortly before noon, the four trailers appeared on the moraine. The man who had not been bogged led the way down. Another miner followed. Then Huxby. The man who had lost his rifle lagged behind. The two leaders reached the broken monoplane wing. Garth saw them read the writing.

Huxby jumped down beside the miners, to stare at the offer of reward that branded him for what he was. With a curse, he ripped the tattered piece of fabric from the wing frame and flung it down into the foaming rapid.

The two men glanced furtively at each other. Huxby pointed to the trail on the opposite bank and signed for them to lead the way across. Neither moved. The first man cursed, and shouted his refusal:

"Jump them boulders? I ain't no lynx. I'm through trailing that devil."

"Me too," declared the second man. "I won't break my neck for nobody."

A second look at the crossing forced Huxby to shout his agreement: "Curse the devil! We'll chase back. He's going on around to our plane. That's where he must have left both of his disabled companions."

Along with the angry statement, the engineer signed for his miners to start back ahead of him. Garth smiled. The two who had seen that offer of reward would not forget it, and Huxby was keenly aware of the fact.

When all four disappeared up on the moraine, Garth recrossed the boulders. There was no sign of Lilith when he came down from the moraine. He called into the entrance tunnel. Back came a quavering cry of relief. A quick crawl took him in through the low narrow passage.

Lilith was breathing hard, almost gasping. "Oh! oh, thank God! I looked and looked, but I could not see you. I thought you must be lying there—like that poor policeman—dead!"

"Hardly. Look here—and here." He showed the pistol, then dumped his flour sack pack. "How about salt on our meat, and a cup of tea with sugar?"

"Alan!" she cried. "You made them give you all this!"

"In a way—yes. Set a pot of snow on the lamp stone, and slice some meat."

Lilith gazed at him in speechless wonderment, her blue eyes wide and very lustrous. He pretended not to notice. He salted and started to eat the first hot fat caribou steak that she served him on one of the looted tin plates.

But after he had told about the bear scare and the luring of the men into the bog, her surprise found utterance.

"Why didn't you kill the beasts while you had the chance?" Garth answered with sudden gravity: "For several reasons, my girl. The main ones are because I am not a killer and because I intend that Vivian Huxby shall be tried and hung for murder."

She gasped: "You—hung! But he has all those men to help him. You're alone—worse than alone. I'm only a hindrance."

He smiled banteringly. "Well, I wouldn't say that. A handy cook isn't altogether a nuisance. The pot is beginning to simmer. You might drop in a pinch of tea. How's your ankle?"

"Ever so much better. I've exercised it a little every time I went outside. And I've half finished my parka. But how—" she interrupted herself—"how can you win if you don't kill them?"

"Why, for a starter, Miss Cook, we'll let them stew in their own juice for a few days. That will tend to soften their bonds of mutual aid. No bedding and a diet of saltless meat will help those three plager jacks to consider the desirability of that five thousand dollar reward I offered for their boss."

"Alan Garth, you're marvelous!" "Not at all. It just happens I know this game, and I told you before that Huxby is only a commonplace wolf. If he were a wolferine, I'd have to look sharp. As it is, we'll stay up here snug and cosy, and enjoy their tea and sugar while you're learning to use your snowshoes."

By noon the next day Lilith's Eskimo suit was finished. Her ankle, though weak, was no longer sore or swollen. Garth bandaged it firmly with a strip of skin, and had her begin practicing on her webs.

Not being hurried or excited, she soon caught the knack of the snowshoe stride. As her ankle became stronger and her feet hardened she developed into a fairly fast snowshoe runner.

Their last climb took them up around the bend in the great cleft. Before they turned back, Garth had the girl fire the pistol. She neither shut her aiming eye nor flinched as she pulled the trigger. Each time the bullet struck within a foot of the nearby mark that Garth set up.

"Not half bad," he approved. "I'll let you go down with me tomorrow morning."

Though the temperature had become milder, it remained below freezing point. As on the other occasion, Garth started down the gulch two hours before dawn. This time Lilith trailed with him.

Huxby had moved his camp to the lake shore opposite the stranded cabin plane. A big fire of birch logs threw its welcome heat into the front of the three-sided lean-to. The engineer and two of his miners lay asleep, huddled in nests of spruce sprays and dry moss.

The fourth man sat on a log beside the fire, his rifle between his knees. He yawned drowsily.

The first slight tinge of dawn had begun to gray the east. But among the trees the night was still black. A sudden flicker of light in the darkness behind the lean-to brought the sleepy watcher's head up with a jerk. Beside the skin-clad man with the lighted match, he saw a second man squinting at him along the barrel of a pistol.

Mexico's Calendar Stone

Carved by Aztec Indians

Among the sights of Mexico City is the famous Calendar stone. It was cut from volcanic rock by Aztec Indians, and the work was done more than four centuries ago, during the reign of the Aztec ruler, Montezuma II, says a writer in the Detroit News.

Aztec tribes were in control of Mexico when it was invaded by the Spaniards. The present name of the country is believed to have come from an old Aztec war-god who was called "Mexitli" or "Mexitli." It is easy to see how his name could have been changed to "Mexico."

The Calendar stone is on view in a museum in Mexico City. On it is carved a great circular figure in the shape of the sun; and the width of the figure is 12 feet.

The stone is composed of volcanic rock, and weighs 20 tons as it exists today. The rock appears to have been obtained from a quarry several miles from Mexico City; and it is estimated that before the carving was done, the rough block weighed from 40 to 50 tons.

It may be that the block was cut down before it was moved from the quarry; but, in any case, it was too heavy for people to lift. There were no oxen or other large beasts of burden in Mexico before the white men came, so it must have been moved with the help of rollers.

At the center of the Calendar stone is a picture or symbol of the sun god and with the rest of the carving, it tells the Aztec story of "the world's history."

Students Offered Course

in the Art of Whistling
In the old horse-and-buggy days whistling was a natural art, acquired without effort. You either whistled or didn't and it was much better ordinarily if you did not, at least for your friends, relates a writer in the Miami Herald.

But things change and now we learn that the high school in Bangs, Texas, has made whistling a regular course in its curriculum. There is nothing like this habit to maintain spirits before graduation, says the Bangs professor. It may be just as badly needed after graduation, too.

That ancient belief about whistling girls coming to bad end may have been repealed in Texas, but our advice to the graduates is not to carry their knowledge into offices and factories when seeking and after getting a job. This ability will not help them. It is more apt to land them on their ears in the alley. Silence, please!

MAY INSPECT HOSPITAL

The new Junipera Serra Hospital, located on Briggs street near Pierce and just west of Junipera Serra boulevard, will be open for public inspection the coming Sunday.

In the designing of the structure, Dr. L. A. Drees, the owner, has used every means to create a restful, informal and attractive atmosphere for the patient. Architecture of the California bungalow type has been followed throughout and, for the most part, the building is one-story. Special exits, screening and ventilation have been provided, and a modern heating plant installed to insure steam radiation in each room. Care and forethought were used in providing separate closets for each patient.

The hospital, which will operate on a 24 hour ambulance and medical service basis, is completely equipped for X-ray, emergency, minor surgery, obstetrical, and medical service, with further facilities to be added at a later date.

AGAIN—NO HOSTESS

Tuesday of last week, the members of the No Hostess Club of San Mateo County met at Dominic's Hotel in Half Moon Bay for their regular monthly luncheon. Sixty-eight women from various sections of the county enjoyed the sociability which always seems to attend good food and plenty of it.

This neighborly organization is becoming more and more popular and an afternoon of restful abandon is promised those who attend.

The next luncheon will be eaten on Tuesday, April 7. For information regarding the places of meeting inquire of Mrs. A. J. Witt Jr., 127 Templeton avenue, Daly City, telephone Randolph 2306.

JUST FEW JOKES—BUT THEY HELP TO BRIGHTEN SESSION

The Music Goes Round And Round And Comes Out Nowhere In Particular—Some Peculiar Legal Decisions Are Rendered.

not around when it was necessary to make the selections and that he (the former) did not deem it his duty to look up any other councilman to consult him about such matters.

Courtesy, we call this! The resolution was finally adopted by the usual four affirmative votes. Councilman Fahey declined to vote for the reasons stated by him.

A citizen in the audience arose and stated it as his opinion that the list had been "hand picked"—whatever that may mean. The writer is not well versed in matters of "hand picking."

The city clerk read a letter from the two citizens who had filed the original referendum petitions to have the Civil Service Ordinance placed on the ballot. The letter made demand that the clerk reinstate as eligible certain names which had been deleted by him by reason of cards received requesting their withdrawal. The clerk was told the communication "has nothing to do with the city council."

The clerk stated a supplemental petition containing the names of 126 eligible electors had been filed with him by the persons submitting the original petition, and which said petition the clerk had theretofore certified as being insufficient after his deduction of 216 names by reason of receipt of requests for withdrawal by signers. Only 54 of these requests, however, were filed with the clerk BEFORE the original petitions were submitted to him. He said if the supplemental petitions were allowed the petition would contain sufficient signatures to be certified.

Notwithstanding that the Supreme Court of this state has set up the rule that the signer of a referendum petition may have his name withdrawn only "BEFORE" such a petition is filed with the officer authorized to receive the same, the clerk withdrew ALL the names of those requesting withdrawal at a later date. He stated this was done on advice of the city attorney.

The city attorney ruled that the filing of the supplemental petition was of no effect and the same was invalid. This in face of the fact that not only the Supreme Court decisions but the governing statute itself uphold the right to file supplemental petitions after original petitions are found to be insufficient.

We quote the language of our own state Supreme Court in the latest decision in regard to withdrawals of names of signers from a referendum petition. The exact language is as follows:

"* * * For in this state a different rule has been laid down, restricting the right of withdrawal to the period BEFORE the filing of the petition with the officer or body authorized to receive it. * * * The clerk is not clothed with authority to alter the petition when it has been filed; he is not authorized to receive extraneous evidence of its contents, or to base his certificate upon statements made to him by electors who have signed it. His certificate must show the result of an examination whereby 'from the records of registration' he shall ascertain whether or not 'said petition' is signed by the requisite number of qualified voters. In our opinion, the signers of such petitions may not withdraw their names or have their names withdrawn by the clerk at any time AFTER the petition has been filed."

Now, where do we go from here? Shall the statute governing such matters prevail—OR?

We can make a good guess which! The council will meet again in regular session on March 24.

ATTEMPTS TO ESTABLISH NEW GLIDE RECORD

Expects To Beat Own Mark Of Consecutive Loops Before Landing

With an attempt to establish a new world's altitude and consecutive loop record in a glider, set as the outstanding attraction at the 1936 California Pacific International Exposition on March 15, the calendar for the next ten days is crammed with interesting events.

The glider record attempt will be made by Fred (Speed) Westphal, noted glider pilot, who will be towed to a height of 20,000 feet and from there try to beat his existing world's record of 65 consecutive loops before landing on the athletic field in the exposition grounds.

The spectacular glider attempt will be made in conjunction with the premiere opening of the Palace of Transportation. The plane which will tow Westphal will be piloted by Earl Ortman, holder of the Mexico-to-Canada airplane speed record. Permission of the Department of Commerce for the towed flight has been obtained by Westphal.

The third largest zoo in the United States under the management of the world's only woman curator is at the San Diego Exposition.

ASTUTE OWNER TREAD ON HEELS OF BEST WINNER

Started With One Old Re-Made Racer Now Going Great Guns

While Harry Field does not rank with Bert Baroni in the money class this former Canadian, now a naturalized American, has made an enviable record with horses during the past year, one that is comparable to that of Baroni in the days of Duck It and Riff Raff.

It will be recalled Baroni first flung his hat into Fame's hallway by winning eight straight with the plater Duck It, then a member of his three horse stable. It was Bert's first experience as a trainer. It made him.

Now we find Harry Field treading a similar pathway. He gained notoriety by taking down twelve purses in a single season at Caliente with the old re-made plater Suitor. Then he reached out and grasped the Australian plater Trevallion, with which he snatched three firsts and a second in as many starts before losing the horse in a claiming race.

he went on the lookout for another horse. Seguro caught his eye. For $1500 he lifted Seguro, which had just returned from a bowed tendon and a year in the grass, from R. F. Carman Sr.

Again Field turned his horse into a gold mine. In nine starts the old John horse hit the money every time, advancing in class to such an extent he was able to win the Oakland handicap Saturday in select company.

VET FIREMEN HOLD INTERESTING MEETING MONDAY

Are Entertained By Address On Desirability Of Voting For School Bonds

The Daly City Veteran Firemen's Association held the regular meeting, Friday of last week at the meeting hall. Comrade President Goldkuhl presided and called the meeting to order at 8 p. m.

There was a good attendance. Comrade Past President A. Vireno performed a short dance just before the meeting opened.

Reports of the banquet were read and the committee discharged with a vote of thanks. The sick committee reported visiting the sick comrades and said are all doing nicely. Comrade Vireno introduced James Ferguson, principal of the Jefferson Union High School, who gave a splendid address on the school, and judging from his talk he is all for the students. He also explained the reason for the bond issue was to improve the conditions and be right up to modern times so as to give the students plenty of space and physical training and to keep abreast of the increased attendance every year.

Mr. Ferguson's talk on the general outline was very interesting and several questions were asked and answered.

The Association favored going on record in support of the bonds.

Firemen Poppiano was elected a comrade of the association and with the assistance of the drill team was initiated and soon became acquainted with some of the older comrades.

The publicity committee was called on for a few remarks. The answer was: "We put it in writing with the assistance of our good editor, Mr. Pitschke of the Daly City Record."

Don't forget the date of the Firemen's ball for the benefit of the Widows and Orphans Fund at Colombo Hall in Colma. Get your parties together and come and have a good time. Tickets may be had from any fireman. The date is May 9—a Saturday evening.

TWO HEADLINERS APPEAR TOGETHER

Absorbing Drama Coming To Local House Next Sunday and Monday

Myrna Loy, the star you've been waiting for, comes to the Daly City Theater for two days, Sunday and Monday, March 15 and 16, in "Whipsaw," an absorbing drama of a jewel thief who is trapped by romance.

Spencer Tracy is Miss Loy's co-star. It is the first time these vital personalities have appeared together.

Long associated in the public mind with exotic roles, Miss Loy became a vivid new personality in "The Thin Man," and followed it with another equally intriguing in "Evelyn Prentice." Now, in "Whipsaw," she has a role of even greater depth and power. The picture presents her as a fascinating adventuress with a fortune in smuggled jewels.

Tracy, recently signed to a contract by the studios, appears as a government agent on the trail of Miss Loy, and becoming involved with her in a series of romantic and humorous situations.

Beginning in England the story moves swiftly to New York and then progresses in rapid steps through various cities and towns of the Middle West. With the stars is a cast that includes Harvey Franklin, William Harrigan, John Qualen, Robert Warwick, Irene Franklin, Lillian Leighton, Wade Boteler and many others.
